Wm. McLaughlin, in charge of a large force of laborers on the Marlinton and Camden Railway, had an unpleasantly narrow escape from exploding dynamite Monday. Mr. McLaughlin was knocked down, but suffered no serious injury.

Sea Claims 700 More Souls

The world is again reading of another of the horrors made awful by the wholesale destruction of human life which will mark this year. The Norge, a Norwegian emigrant ship, bound from Copenhagen to America, carrying about a thousand souls, strikes a rock on the Scottish coast during a storm and goes to the bottom, carrying to a watery grave over 700 of her passengers, many of whom are women and children. This is considered the worst calamity on record in trans-Atlantic shipping. And, while lacking the harrowing details of the Iroquois theater and the recent New York harbor disaster added by fire the loss of life places well towards the top of the lists of the world's horror.

PLACES CLOSED AND KEEPERS UNDER BOND.

Miss Emma Burner Instrumental in Abating the Nuisance.

The principal business in Cass, excepting the lumber industry, received a severe setback Thursday when Officer Paris D. Yeager, under authority of warrants issued by Justice Rodgers upon complaint of Miss Emma Burner and Allen E. Burner, arrested Gratz Slaven, James Sizemore, J. W. Graham, James Benson, Arthur De Nio, Joe Griffith and John Herbert, charged with the illicit sale of intoxicants in the town of Cass.

Slaven and De Nio waived examination and were each put under a $100 bond to appear before the grand jury and $500 not to sell.

The others elected to stand trial and asked that Justice D. B. McElwae hear their cases. The hearings took up the afternoon of Friday and half the day Saturday. Attorneys H. S. Rucker, N. C. McNeil and J. W. Yeager appeared for the defendants and T. S. McNeel for the State. The charge against J. W. Graham, locally known as "Pinhead," was not sustained and the case dismissed.

Sizemore, seeing that the odds were against him, stepped out of the court house unbeknown to the officers and quietly stole away. He has not since been heard from.

The weight of evidence showed that the several defendants were selling and exposing for sale wines, whiskies, beer and drinks of like nature, in the town of Cass, and were bound to wait the action of the grand jury under bonds of $100 each and not to sell upon forfeiture of $500. All were able to find acceptable bondsmen.

This blow at the illicit whiskey trade is directly due to the efforts of Miss Emma Burner, a young woman with the courage of her convictions, and her brother Allen E. Burner, supported by the testimony of one John Burns, a woodsman of Pike county, Kentucky, who saw all these bars in a night, sampled their wares, got into trouble, was cast into prison, and, experiencing a change of heart, was willing to aid in bringing to the bar of justice the men who put in his way the temptation which resulted in his fall from grace.

The method of procuring evidence by Miss Burner was a little out of the ordinary. Dressing in men's attire she went to the places at night and tried to buy whiskey. Only one sold to her. The others, supposing her to be a boy under twenty-one, refused. She saw it sold to others, however, and her evidence had as much weight as though she had been able to buy whiskey.

Off for "Camp Greenbrier."

Dr. Henry Converse left Wednesday afternoon for Camp Greenbrier, Alderson county, W. Va., where he will spend the next eight weeks teaching mathematics and science.

Camp Greenbrier is beautifully located in the mountains of West Virginia, by the side of a large stream of water, where it was established for the instruction of the youth of the land who desire to prepare themselves to matriculate at Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Johns Hopkins, the University of Virginia, and other large schools for the country. Six regular instructors are employed in addition to an instructor in athletics, and the camp is equipped especially with a view to making it a delightful out door summer resort for the young men while they are pursuing their studies.—Rockingham Register.

Baseball.

The citizens of Marlinton celebrated the Glorious Fourth by coming out in large numbers to the baseball game in the afternoon between the Regulars and the Second teams.

The weather was fine, the crowd large and enthusiastic and the game hotly contested from first to last. The Regulars won by a score of 10 to 5.

The teams lined up as follows with Messrs. Tilton and Alexander umpires and Messrs. Miller and Patchin timekeepers and scorers:

REGULARS.
Pitcher, Sterling Yeager.
Catcher, Cary B. Twyford.
First Base, S. B. Wallace.
Second Base, W. B. King.
Third Base, S. L. Hogsett.
Short Stop, Calvin W. Price.
Left Field, Ted King.
Center Field, H. Heylmen.
Right Field, Arthur Patterson.

SECOND TEAM.
Pitcher, Fred McLaughlin.
Catcher, Dr. Guilford.
First Base, Floyd E. Boston.
Second Base, Dr. Yeager.
Third Base, J. A. Judson.
Short Stop, Ira Osborne.
Left Field, T. G. Daily.
Center Field, Paul Yeager.

The feature of the game was the work of the pitchers, although the team work of each nine on the whole was good.

Up to the ninth inning the score was about even and of a consequence the interest was intense. In the first half of the last inning the Regulars batted up five runs and won the game amid a silence that would have been painful but for the yells of the team itself, for while the Regulars got the game the spectators were truly loyal to the Second team.

The especial feature of the game, however, was the ladies, about a hundred of whom graced the occasion. In their presence is due, in no small part, the strenuous batting, base running and pitching even after the weight of a bat had become a burden and the eye grown dim from long expectant waiting for an easy ball or some other material that could be utilized for a grand stand play and advancement of chivalry.

Let it be known to all the world that of all ladies there are none so fair as those of Marlinton and that we are ever ready to cross a bat with any who would hold otherwise.

Bills and Duns.

The way in which Pocahontas county send out bills to people that owe them is awful to contemplate. If a merchant discovers that a customer owes him a bill, he will set down in the most cold blooded way and send him a statement of his account and dun the man. The man when he receives it will glance over the account in the most casual way and stick it in his pocket and remark that he will pay it some day maybe and goes off and buys some more goods of the merchant.

A farmer who has sold a pig will make off a bill and send it in and still retain the friendship of the debtor.

In the old days as we remember them, if a man was dunned in this brutal matter of fact way he would not sleep until he paid it but he would never, no never, have anything more to do with the sordid grasping creditor.

When he got old and his grandchildren would gather around the fireside he would relate how he had never been dunned but once and that was in the fall of 1839 when Jonathan Sourcrot sent him a dun for a brinded heifer, and he had paid it but Jonathan had never done any good from that day to this.

When a creditor had to have money he would work a scheme to get it. He very well knew that it did not lie in his mouth to ask for his money and all advances to a settlement must come from the other side. But when he was just compelled to have money and could not borrow he would set out to collect some that was due him.

The first step was to go to the debtor's house and stay all night. When he rode up to the fence just before supper and hollered "hello!" the poor debtor would come out with a look of suspicion in his eye, which the creditor would explain away by saying that he was riding around trying to find some stock. They would pass a very pleasant evening slandering their neighbors and just before bed time the debtor would have a sudden thought and propose a settlement which the creditor would with much reluctance and many apologies grant.

Nowadays the commercial feeling has possessed all of us and we dun and dun and write letters threatening to have the law on them and gather in money from every side and pay it out to those who are rubbing it into us. The good old days are passing away. Once a twenty-five cent piece as it circulated in a neighborhood left as big a wake as it does in Virginia today, but with the advent of modern improvements we have become very sordid and grasping and we can now dun a man and live.
